

Bill 66: Restoring Ontario's Competitiveness Act is an omnibus bill which seeks to amend many previous pieces of Ontario legislation. Critics of the bill argue that it will permit suburban development on the protected and environmentally-sensitive Ontario Greenbelt, repeal clean water rules implemented after the Walkerton E. coli outbreak, and "compromise the health and safety of Ontarians."

The intention is to reduce red tape, but in the process it allows industry to bypass legal requirements made to ensure careful planning, and rolls back decades of environmental progress.

This Wikipedia page explains the Act.

Conservation Ontario has provided a sample email to invite Ontarians to express their concerns about Schedule 10 to their MPP:

We at REAL would like to alert you of the situation, and urge you to voice your concerns and take appropriate action so that we may maintain the environmental progress that we have collectively made.
